ATLANTA, GA., SEPTEMBER 15, 1888.

A word as to Sunday's Constitution. We have limited the size of tomorrow's Constitution to twenty pages. We have already a large volume of news matter and gossip that must be accommodated. We have orders in various sections of the country for specials that will require more than usual space.

All of this limits our advertising space to less than we carried last Sunday, and we are compelled to reserve the right to reject all advertisements received after eight o'clock tonight, in case we cannot find room for them without trenching on our news columns. Bring in your advertisements early and we will try and make room for all of them. By coming early you will secure a better position than by waiting until late in the night. We shall print over twenty thousand copies of tomorrow's paper, and the rights of those who buy the Constitution for all the news must be protected.

The spectacle of a party's nominees refusing to serve is a unique spectacle in this great nation of office-seekers. Sam Small's party is nothing if not unique.

It will be well for democrats to remember that the democratic gains in Maine were very nearly as large as the republican gains.

"She Who Must Be Obeyed." The wonderful woman in Rider Haggard's most remarkable romance—the "She who must be obeyed," figures more or less everywhere, and in every phase of life, in the small as well as in the larger circles of society.

We do not mean that this woman resembles Mr. Haggard's heroine in all respects—the woman we have in view is the one who belongs to the "must be obeyed type." She is always bobbing up just when she is least expected, and it goes without saying that she has her own way.

She made her appearance in the West Virginia democratic state convention, the other day, and stamped the delegates. It seems that English and Johnson were the opposing candidates for judge of the supreme court. Half a dozen ballots were taken without a nomination, and on the seventh ballot 345 votes were cast for English and 290 for Johnson. As the two-thirds rule was in force neither had received votes enough. At this juncture Miss Livia Simpson, of Point Pleasant, who had been writing at a reporter's desk on the platform, descended to the convention floor and shouted for English. In her excitement she dropped her hat. A chivalrous delegate raised it on a pole above the banner of his delegation. The convention went wild at the sight, and when Miss Livia seized the banner and waved it aloft the delegates swarmed about her. Two rival bands struck up "Dixie" and "Yankee Doodle," and the scene baffled description.

The opponents of English lost heart when this girl with streaming black hair and flashing eyes charged down on them, and when the next ballot was taken went over to the favorite. English was then nominated by acclamation.

In this case the "She who must be obeyed" acted upon the impulse of the moment, but if the whole thing had been deliberately planned the effect would not have been greater. It is only another illustration of the poet's saying: "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rocks the world."

BILLY CHANDLER says that New Hampshire is all right for the republicans. This must be very reassuring to the republican campaign committee.

The good people of Decatur, Alabama, deserve the hearty sympathy and assistance of the residents of sister cities. The system of isolation now in force is rather severe.

The news of Sam Randall's improvement in health will be received with delight everywhere. Mr. Randall is one statesman who cannot be spared.

A Good Legislator.

Sunday's Augusta Chronicle comes to hand, after a long delay, occasioned by the floods, with the following handsome notice of one of Fulton's democratic nominees for the house:

The candidacy of Hon. Clark Howell for the legislature from Fulton county recalls a very important measure with which he was identified in the last house of representatives. He was a member of the committee which secured the railroads to Atlanta, and was advanced so strongly by Mr. Howell that will again come up before the legislature, and the charter will probably be granted. Mr. Howell was before the people of Fulton county, submitting his claims, of course, to the democratic primary election to be held next Saturday, September 22.

A LIEUTENANT in the German army is examining our coast defenses. When tasks where they are it will be hard to give him a satisfactory answer.

THE WEATHER is evidently preparing to go into the funny business again.

RICHES OF SONORA.

Lieutenant H. O. Flpper, the colored cadet, who will be remembered for his escape at West Point military academy, is at present engaged in surveying in Sonora for some large land and mine syndicate, and keeps in regular correspondence with parties in El Paso, in which city he resided for some time.

He has been through the earthquake district around Bavispe and the headwaters of the Yaqui river. He says nobody can imagine the unexplored and undeveloped mineral riches of that section of country.

Flpper has turned out to be a first-class engineer and mining expert, and has been promising to before him that he has remained in the army. His opinions on mining investments are treated with the greatest consideration by capitalists and investors. He says that the discoveries made by him last year for the Sonora Land company in the neighborhood of Guadalupe and Tepic were well and truly verified, and that the majority of Fulton county will induce next Wednesday in their primary election.

DUN & Co.'s weekly Review of Trade will be read with interest. The candidacy of the grandson of Wm. Henry Harrison has been progressing, and we hope that any constituency will look with interest at what the dems of Fulton county will do.

THE FEVER TRAIN.

Scenes on the Trip to Hendersonville.

Panic Among the Refugees on Announcement of One of Their Number
Being Sick—On the Train.

ON THE TRAIN, September 14.—Never did a man take a ghastlier ride than THE CONSTITUTION correspondent took when he left the Union depot with the train of yellow fever refugees from Florida.

The stop in Atlanta, the serving of luncheons, the excitement of the city, seemed to have infected the crowd, and from the moment the train pulled out of the depot it was apparent that Dr. Guiters had lost control of the crowd. Men and women were nervous to an uncontrollable degree. A half dozen stronger spirits would organize on each car and practically take charge of it. If a passenger complained of feeling unwell, there was an instant demand for him to be put off the train. In two cases this demand would have been enforced by main strength, but for the determination of two others, who were determined not to let one in a woman who was sick with a chill, which in a few moments was transformed into fever. She was immediately taken from one car into another, and the car she was ejected from was barricaded and no one allowed to enter it. This trick was soon discovered, and as the rumors spread that there were sick people on this car, a quarantine was immediately established in every other car. The consequence was that before the train reached the Carolina the every car was practically closed and sealed, every car, and there was quarantine all along the line, and being locked up for nearly two days and nights, without sleep, excited by the fears of the plague, hungry and thirsty, it is remarkable that there were not actual tragedies enacted on that train.

A long time was about to be confined, and who was in great mental and physical suffering, was by order of the physician put off at White Sulphur Springs station, it having been declared that the fatigued soul and the jolting of carriages ruined her life.

A curious and ludicrous effect was produced at almost every station. The crowd of loafers that usually hang about depots came peering about the car windows to investigate the train, thinking it was the yellow fever train, the dogs like sheep, and as the contagion spread, whole villages scudding around corners, and taking for the woods, as the train moved in slow and glazily lengthening. At White Sulphur Springs, Mr. W. M. of the passengers on the train were missing. It was presumed that in some way they had escaped from the car after the train had pulled out, and took their chances by a jump from the car and a dash into the river.

REFUGEE BEHAVIOR AT HENDERSONVILLE.

A very strange thing was done upon the arrival of the refugees at Hendersonville. Dr. Guiters removed all restraint upon reaching this point. There was no quarantine established, and the refugees who had been scattered and guarded all the way from Florida to this point, were at liberty to go where they pleased. There being no quarantine against Hendersonville and no quarantine here, there is nothing to prevent the four hundred refugees, seven of whom are down with the fever, going where they please. They are scattering widely.

When the train load of yellow-faced, gaunt and nervous refugees were dumped at Hendersonville's gallows gate, it was a scene which rivalled the most affecting scenes of war.

Men who, in the rush at Jacksonville, had been separated from their families, hustled into cars and locked up, and who had made the entire trip without knowing whether or not they would be allowed to board up, were given their freedom rushed madly from group to another in the too frequently vain search for their loved ones, until, worn out and completely undone from loss of sleep and nervous prostration, they sank into the ground unable to go farther and remained here until the relief committee which had been organized by the citizens carried them to the hospitable homes of some of the villagers where they were cared for. Mothers with babies in their arms, and children with their limbs broken, they craved food and water and a resting place were vainly searching among the crowd for missing husbands. Children were searching for parents and parents for children. It took the whole day to get the refugees collected and to get them all accommodated in simple long lines of tents had been pitched in every part of the town. Hendersonville is a village of about two thousand inhabitants, is mountainous and is scattered over a large territory. The burden of taking care of so many refugees, who are all in a condition which can be better imagined than described. The patients are being cared for by competent nurses, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to provide for the refugees. There are nine cases of yellow fever at present, and two more subjects, as follows: Convalvesing, F. H. Page, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Douglass, W. T. Clark (colored), child of Mrs. Brotherton; doing well, Dave Frank, W. H. Page, Dr. Green, especially the A. W. Page, H. M. Morris and his wife. The refugees say they will never forget the big hearts of the people of Hendersonville. Colonel McGill is chairman of the relief committee, which meets twice a day.

The town is in a condition of great alarm. A citizen said today, "It was thought that in offering a place of refuge that perhaps a score or so of well-to-do men, with their families who desired to spend a month or two away from Florida would come to Hendersonville, but the city could easily accommodate it as a health resort, and a pleasant place, and at the same time get a reasonable profit out of the matter. It never expected to become the dumping place for whole train loads of temporary passengers, arriving perhaps not much older than the community for at least two months. Hendersonville is willing to do her share, as other cities do, but this partakes of the nature of an outrage."

The citizens of the city are doing all they can to help, but there is nothing to prevent a hundred of them from entering Nashville, Richmond, Atlanta, or any other point to-morrow morning.

THE FIFTH WARD

Has a Little Sensation which is Strictly Local.

There is somewhat of a sensation in the fifth ward.

Some parties who are "at outs" with Councilman Beutell met in Miles Hall, Marietta street, and denounced Councilman Beutell, Bice and Amorous because certain street work had not been pushed.

At the meeting were Messrs. D. P. Morris, the Shomo brothers, J. V. Johnson and Dr. Hodson.

"I was not invited to attend," said Councilman Beutell, "and consequently my critics had to come to me." "But I am here," he said, "I will state that as long as the 9th of last February I had an appropriation passed of $1,000 for Luckie street from Simson to North Avenue. On the 19th of April $300 was appropriated for Mullis street from Fowler to Marietta with the result that the committee of public works had all the property owners to sign a release for damages before work commenced. On the 8th of February $200 was passed up for Alexander street from Marietta to Williams. On July 31, $1,000 was set aside for West Baker from Williams to Hull."

"Why is it that the work has not been done?"

"Simply because the citizens along these streets were not compelled with the requirements of signing releases. That is something I cannot do for them."

THE THIRD PARTY

Have a High Old Time in the Courthouse.

A Legislative Ticket Nominated, Which as Promptly Declines—Sam Small For the Senate.

The crowd at the courthouse last night was a success.

A fair estimate places the number of people at about eight hundred.

But the great majority of those who were present took no part in the action of the meeting.

They were simply in the building. That's all.

It was a great night for the lookers on in Vienna.

There were a large number of prohibitionists, good many anti-prohibitionists, and about all the third party men in the city, which party, as is well known, does not comprise a large number of sovereigns, by any means.

The third party people ran the meeting from beginning to end.

The other people present were simply interested spectators of the brief proceedings.

The meeting was presided over by a third party man, who was elevated to the chair by the motion of a third party man, carried by third party men, the speaking was done by third party men, and all of the motions were made and adopted by third party men.

That was the size of it.

Sam Small made an entertaining speech, as he always does, and was received with a standing ovation. At times he was in the lead, but the applause was in every instance started by the third party people. It must be admitted, however, that the laughter and applause became general at times, particularly when the speaker got off his happy anecdotage.

Indeed, it may be set down as a fact that the great majority of the people present were not in sympathy with the action of the meeting. If they were, they certainly did not show it. Barring the third party contingent, the disposition of the assembly seemed to be studiously abstain from participating in the proceedings.

It was a strictly non-committal crowd, with a few honorable third party exceptions.

Human beings are, by nature, socially inclined—men and women, together, are not. It is the desire of the third party to see as large a gathering at a circus sit patiently till the last act, but who in no wise feel called upon to indorse the performances in the ring.

The object of the meeting was to put out a straight prohibition ticket for the legislature, and the ticket did not accomplish what it was designed to do.

The commanding form of Dr. Hawthorne was no where to be seen. People looked in vain for the smiling countenance of Major George H. Miller, or the garrulous tongue of Mr. George G. Adair was sadly missed. Judge William Hammond did not put in an appearance. The list of prominent prohibition advocates could not greatly lengthened. But the names mentioned are quite sufficient to show the lack of interest in the meeting among the leaders.

The well-known gentlemen who simply came to see and hear may be mentioned. Messrs. Green T. Dodd, P. H. Kettner, William L. Linn, Frank Arnold, F. A. Richardson, William Markham, Thomas Corrigan, David A. Cook, Lewis Clarke, George F. Forbes, W. H. Clayton, Marcellus Jackson, John Lovett, John C. Colvin, John A. Doane, Peter Lawler, Jerry Goldsmith, Charles B. Haskell, Mote Boyd, William Malone, James D. Ransom, William Mickelberry, Thomas Pollard, D. A. Beatie, B. F. Lovett, Reed, and others.

There were William and Drs. Robert Westermeyer, Hubbard Wilson, H. S. Bradfield and others.

Stuntpiece. The meeting was short. It was over half past nine. The proceedings vividly suggested the form of a mermaid, which begins with the face and body of a beautiful woman and tapers down the slimy tail of a fish.

The proceedings opened with the noble prayer of Mr. Jones and the brilliant speech of Mr. Small, and petered out in a tame resolution.

Children were searching for the crowd for missing husbands. Children were searching for parents and parents for children. It took the whole day to get the refugees collected and to get them all accommodated in simple long lines of tents had been pitched in every part of the town. Hendersonville is a village of about two thousand inhabitants, is mountainous and is scattered over a large territory.

The burden of taking care of so many refugees, who are all in a condition which can be better imagined than described. The patients are being cared for by competent nurses, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to provide for the refugees.

There are nine cases of yellow fever at present, and two more subjects, as follows: Convalvesing, F. H. Page, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Douglass, W. T. Clark (colored), child of Mrs. Brotherton; doing well, Dave Frank, W. H. Page, Dr. Green, especially the A. W. Page, H. M. Morris and his wife.

Mr. Jones opened the meeting with prayer, and Dr. Small was elected chairman, and the motion was carried unanimously.

The Rev. Sam. Small's Speech.

Mr. Small was applauded as he ascended the steps. He spoke as follows:

Fellow-citizens of Fulton County, I thank you for your interest in this meeting, and for your approval of the motion to elect me chairman of the meeting. I presume that action was in accordance with the understanding that I was to be here as an honored participant. I am to appear before the legislature and to speak in the assemblies of this sort. It appears to me that I have the same right which any other citizens enjoy of attending the meetings of the legislature.

It is therefore with great pleasure, with a heart full of earnestness, that I call upon all the members of this assembly to come to the aid of the people of the South.

Mr. Jones opened the meeting with prayer, and Dr. Small was elected chairman, and the motion was carried unanimously.

Mr. Guiters' Speech.

Mr. Guiters was applauded as he ascended the steps. He spoke as follows:

Fellow-citizens of Fulton County, I thank you for your interest in this meeting, and for your approval of the motion to elect me chairman of the meeting. I presume that action was in accordance with the understanding that I was to be here as an honored participant.

Mr. Guiters' Speech.

Mr. Guiters was applauded as he ascended the steps. He spoke as follows:

Fellow-citizens of Fulton County, I thank you for your interest in this meeting, and for your approval of the motion to elect me chairman of the meeting. I presume that action was in accordance with the understanding that I was to be here as an honored participant.

It appears to me that I have the same right which any other citizens enjoy of attending the meetings of the legislature.

It is therefore with great pleasure, with a heart full of earnestness, that I call upon all the members of this assembly to come to the aid of the people of the South.

Mr. Jones opened the meeting with prayer, and Dr. Small was elected chairman, and the motion was carried unanimously.
